

Statistics from the optimization point of view

We would like to look inside some classical statistical procedures (e.g., forecasting time series) from an optimization point of view. The aim is to use global optimization techniques to solve optimal estimation problems in statistics